Intellectual property rights (IPR) refers to the legal rights given to the inventor or creator to protect his invention or creation for a certain period of time.[1] These legal rights confer an exclusive right to the inventor/creator or his assignee to fully utilize his invention/creation for a given period of time.

Intellectual Property Law includes patents, copyrights, trademarks, and trade secrets. All of these areas are related in that they deal with protecting products of the mind but in other ways they are very different.

IPR provide certain exclusive rights to the inventors or creators of that property, in order to enable them to reap commercial benefits from their creative efforts or reputation. There are several types of intellectual property protection like patent, copyright, trademark, etc.

An example of a plant patent is pest-free versions of fruit trees. But inventors may also want a design patent if the tree has unique visual properties. Utility patents: Protection for a product that serves a practical purpose and is useful. IP examples include vehicle safety systems, software, and pharmaceuticals.

Christu Jyothi Institute Of Technology & Science DEPARTMENT OF ECE Organized A Three day Workshop On “RESEARCH METHOD & PRACTICE” Dt.14-12-2022 & 16-12-2022. Dr.B.Prashanth was the Chief Guest Discussed about Importance of “RESEARCH METHOD & PRACTICE” in the Department. At Last The Memento Was Given To The Chief Guest. The Lecture Was attended by 60 Students and Faculty Members of all departments.

There are two main categories of research methods: qualitative research methods and quantitative research methods. Quantitative research methods involve using numbers to measure data. Researchers can use statistical analysis to find connections and meaning in the data.

Practice-research is a methodology in which knowledge is gained via the doing of something, rather than reading about it (desk-research), or inquiring into what other people know about that thing (i.e., interviews, surveys, etc.) or other more traditional models of research such as case studies and ethnographies
